Peter

Thanks. I will let the rest of the group know our options.

Subject: Sipper in Durango

Dan – I was talking to Bill Simon about a placing a sipper in Durango. We both think it would be a good idea because we think there are occasional slugs of high metal concentrations that come down the river that don't get caught by monthly grab samples, especially during the late summer rains.

Starting about ½ mile below the Trimble Lane Bridge (below Bakers Bridge) to just above the first bend in the river above the 32nd St. bridge in Durango is all sandy bottom. I'm not sure if that's a good substrate for sippers to be placed in. As I mentioned on the phone, I have a friend who lives along the Animas just above the first river bend above the 32nd St. Bridge where the river bottom starts to become rocky as it enters Durango. If you want to talk further about sipper placement in Durango, let me know.
